LEGEND OF NOWRUZ

Nowruz (Persian: [noːrūz]; meaning “New Day”), the Iranian New Year, also known as the Persian New Year has been celebrated for over 3000 years by Iranians of all religious, ethnic and linguistic backgrounds, along with some other people from diverse ethno-linguistic communities in Western Asia, Central Asia, the Caucasus, the Black Sea Basin, and the Balkans. Nowruz is the day of the vernal equinox, and marks the beginning of spring in the northern hemisphere. It marks the first day of the first month (Farvardin) in the Iranian calendar which usually falls between March 19-20. The moment the sun crosses the celestial equator is exactly when Iranian families world-wide gather together to observe the rituals.

Spring breaks the cold uniformity of winter. It brandishes the power of diversity and drives Life forward into the eternal cycle of time. Nature calls upon diversity to renew and replenish life that thaws the stagnant ice of winter. Nature ultimately wins the battle with time by resisting uniformity and homogeneity.

Just as nature thrives on diversity, humanity relies on diversity as an inherent mechanism of survival. From the very primitive and basic instincts of sustenance and procreation, to the complex chemistry of civilization, the transition from human to humane occurs upon the fertile landscape of diversity.

Perhaps the fundamental law of humanity is defined by diversity that brings about change and renewal. The very foundation of Civilization is built upon diversity and the embrace of change as if it were otherwise, humanity would be content with the primitive state of being merely human without enjoying the promise of living humanely.

Being Iranian defies uniformity and homogeneity. Iranians are not identified by race, creed or even language. A Guilaní person from the north has just as much claim to being Iranian as a Khuzistani Arab from the south west. The Beluchistanis of the far east have as much stake in the history, culture and folklore of Iran as the Kurdish and Azerbaijani’s of the west and north west.

Iranians defied the myth of the nation by relying on diversity to define their identity. The wisdom of diversity inspired Iranians to acknowledge Nature and the cycle of Nature as their celebration of renewal and rebirth at the precise moment of the Vernal Equinox. By relying on nature to celebrate the new year, Iranians acknowledge diversity as the core of their identity. Diversity as manifested by nature itself, drives life forward into time as it transforms the human into the humane.

What better inspiration for a people who call themselves Iranian, than those uttered by Saadi who recognizes the importance of diversity by emphasizing the interdependence of humanity:

Human beings are members of a whole in creation of one essence and soul. If one member is afflicted with pain, other members uneasy will remain

It is possible that the most important contribution Canadians of Iranian descent can ever make to their newfound home across the globe, is in resonating with what makes Canada one of the greatest countries in the world; the power of diversity to shape democracy.

The Tirgan family celebrates this new year by embracing diversity.

Since 1993, the Toronto Centre for the Arts (TCA) has welcomed thousands of visitors, patrons, performers and artists through its grand main entrance.

The TCA began and remains as unique and diverse as the Toronto community itself, a testament to the virtues of harmony, vitality and celebration, with a spirit that embraces innovation and tradition equally.

Located in the heart of the GTA, no other entertainment and arts facility is better positioned than the Toronto Centre for the Arts. It is easily accessible by major highways, arteries as well as the public transit system. Equidistant between two major TTC stations (the Sheppard and North York Centre stations), the Centre’s surrounding area boasts ample on-street and underground parking, and convenient special needs parking near the theatre entrance.
